Dillard University

A sense of time and place

It is unwise to make a decision that will affect the rest of your life without taking into account your goals, your capabilities and the real possibilities open to you to realize a constructive life. It is naive to ignore the present when weighing the factors in a matter concerning your future. You may know, pretty well, what you are looking for, but you may not be sure where to find it. We would like to tell you about Dillard University.

We incorporate our philosophy in the statement: "Dillard is dedicated to the development of men and women to live a good life, to make a good living and to be responsible citizens." A simple yet magnificent aim. For what surpasses the attainment of a good life, which gives the inward satisfaction of responsible citizenship—the very essence of a just society?

To you, we present a challenge and a chance to seek an "individualized" education from a University certain of its role.

Thorough investigation of the college you intend to live with and learn from cannot be stressed enough. For that reason, Dillard University offers you this opportunity to become familiar with its academic program, its scholarly yet enjoyable atmosphere and its instructional resources for you.

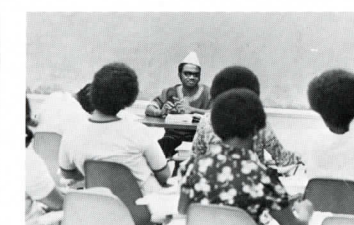

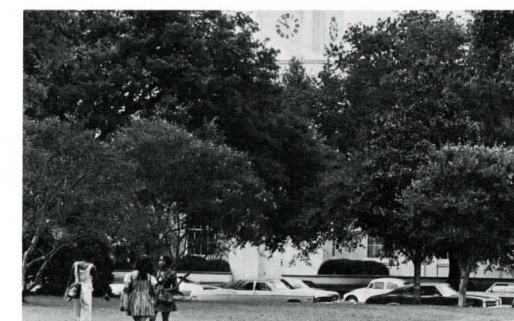

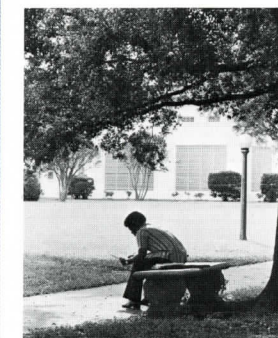

A consciousness of heritage

In order to establish a sense of purpose that is flexible enough to accommodate change, it is essential to keep sight of one's heritage.

Unlike most private colleges which began as institutions for the privileged, Dillard was founded in 1869 to provide academic instruction for any deserving persons regardless of race or economic status. In that year, Straight University (renamed Straight College) and the Union Normal School (renamed New Orleans University) were established. In 1930, they were merged into Dillard University and dedicated to continuing the work of the parent institutions.

Straight College was founded and operated by the American Missionary Association of the Congregational Church, and New Orleans University was affiliated with the Freedman's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church. These institutions were founded and chartered to serve all people and to provide an opportunity for professional service by all people. Today, keeping in mind the diverse backgrounds of the founders of our parent institutions and their philosophy of mutual respect for different cultures and people, we continue their practices. Dillard makes no distinction as to religion, race, color or sex in the admission of students or in the employment of faculty and administrators.

In 1935, Dillard University began instruction at the present site. Today we are proud of our unique character which is at the same time contemporary and traditional. It reflects our respected past and our present academic excellence. The University at the present site was named in honor of James Hardy Dillard, whose distinguished service to Southern education forms an important chapter in the history of American education.

New Orleans

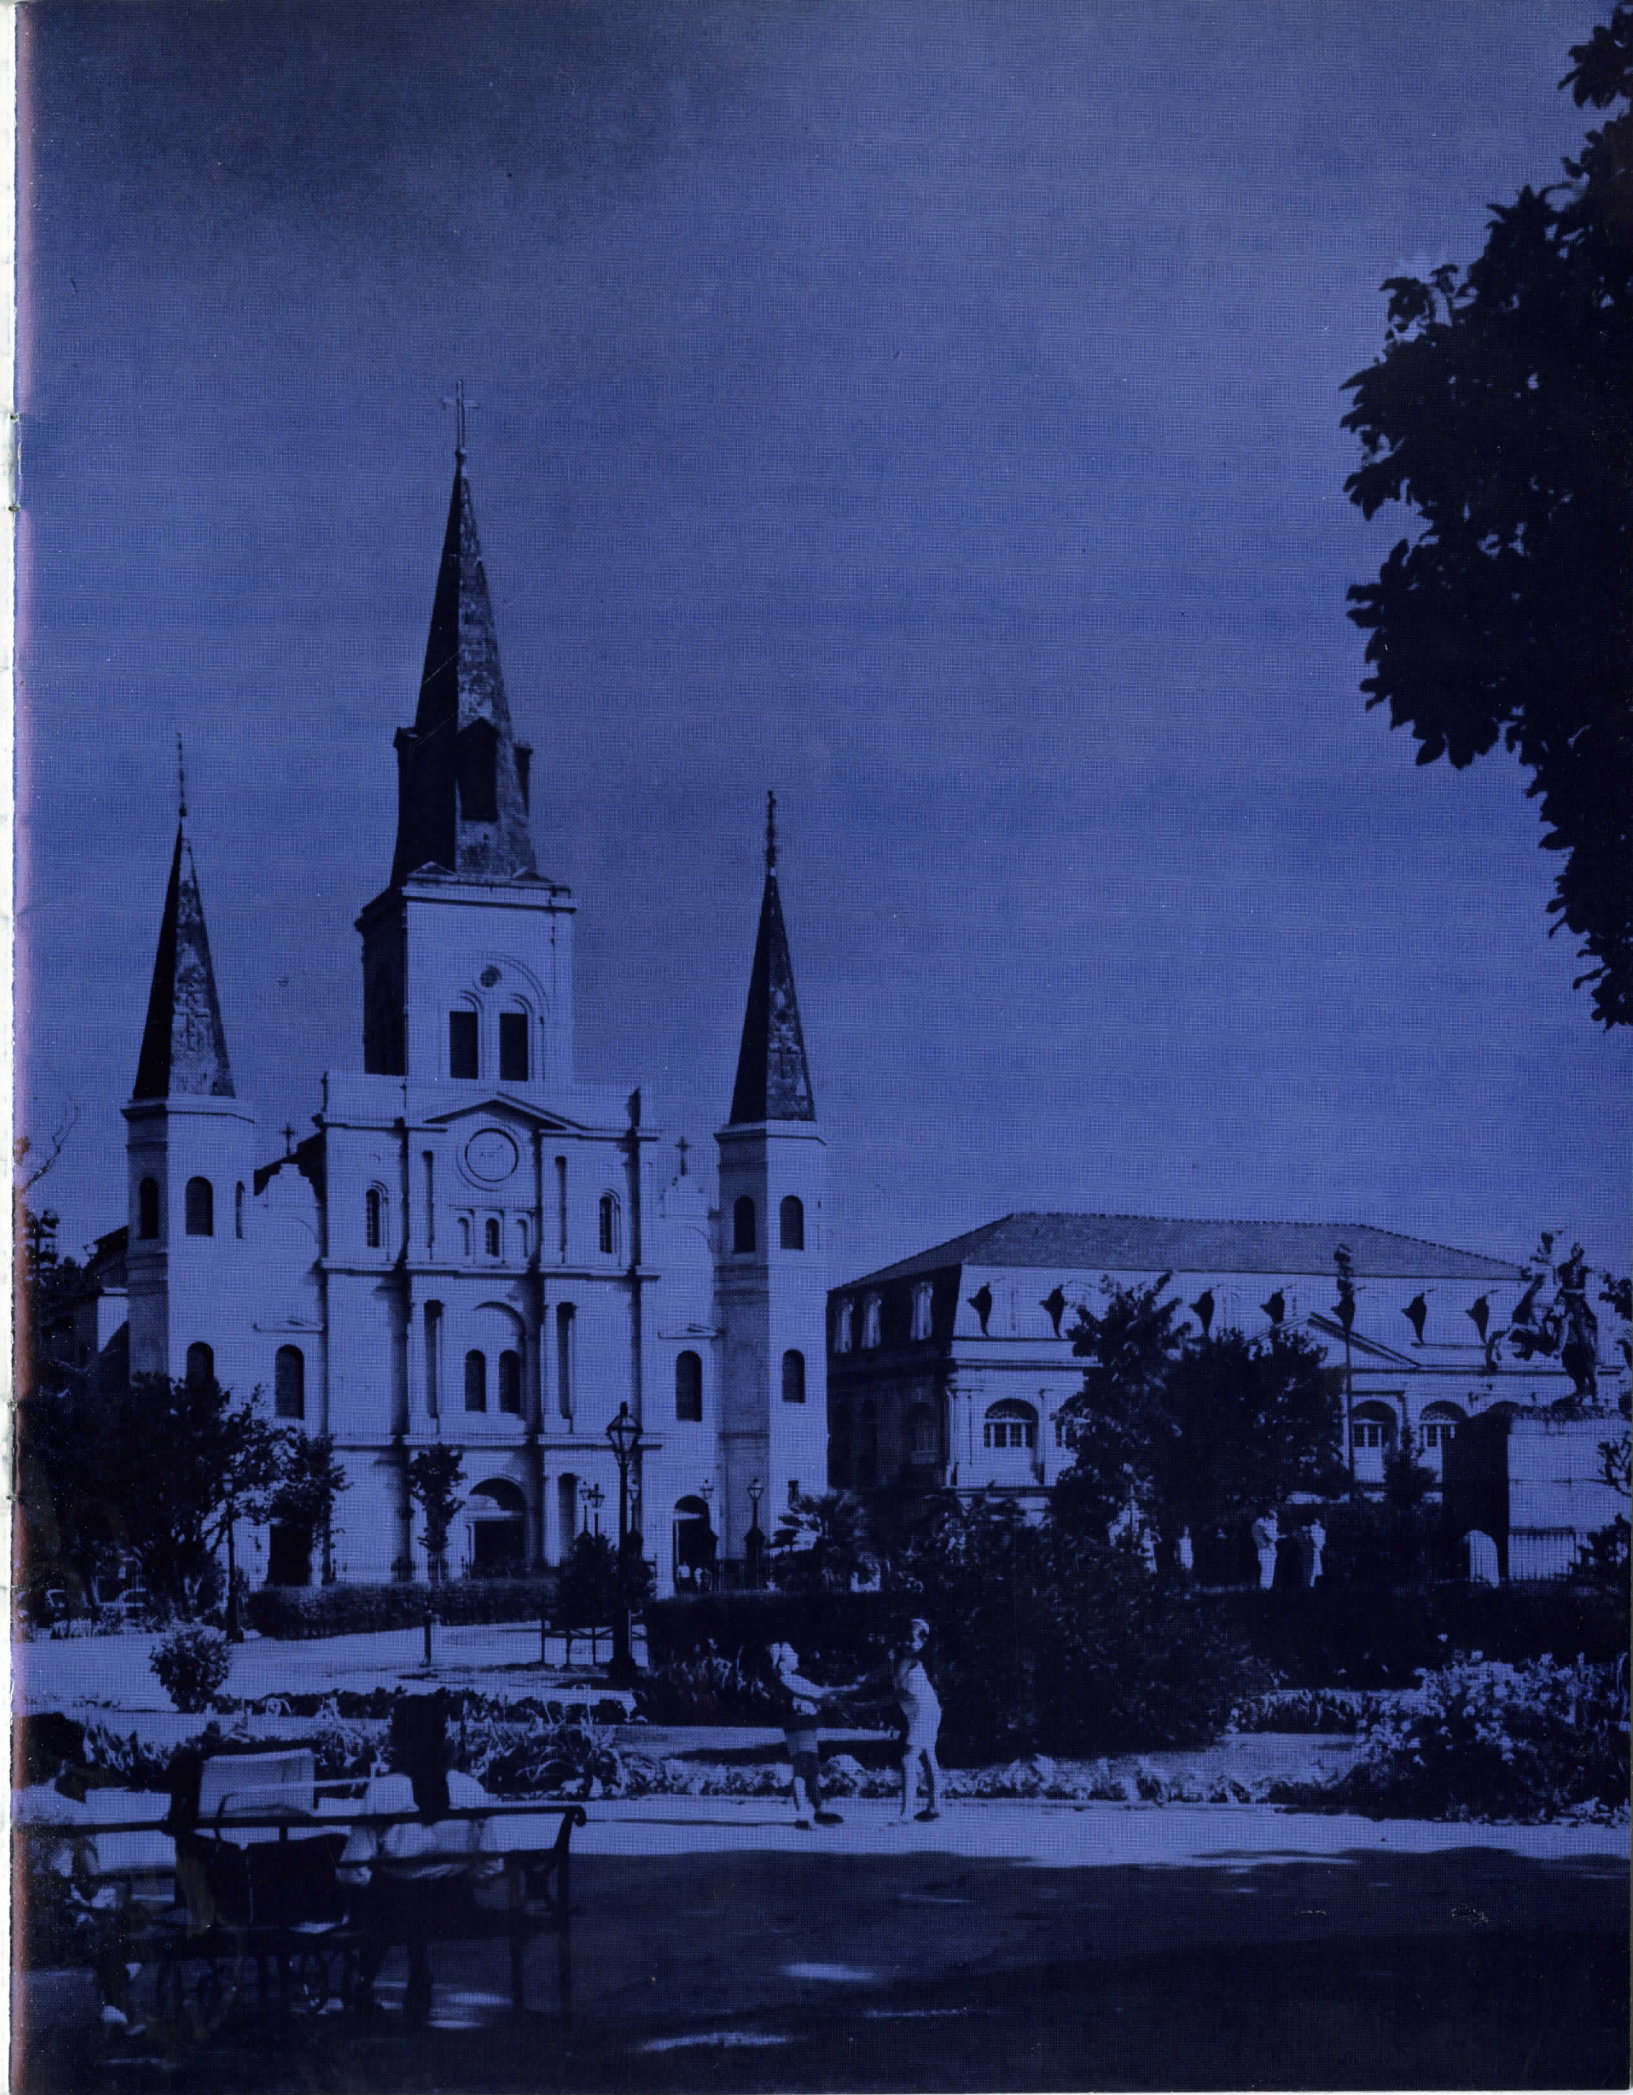

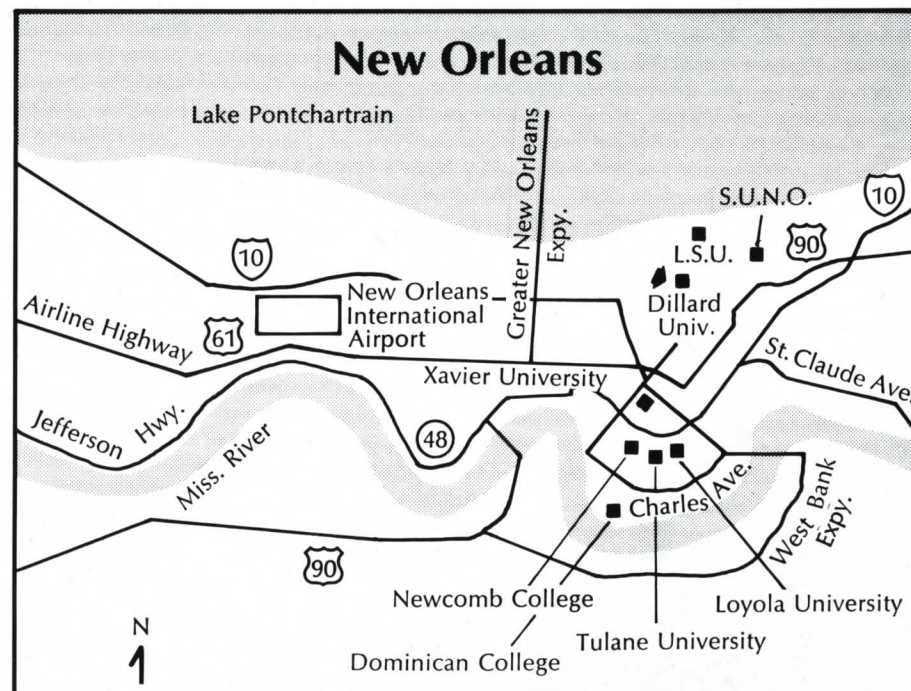

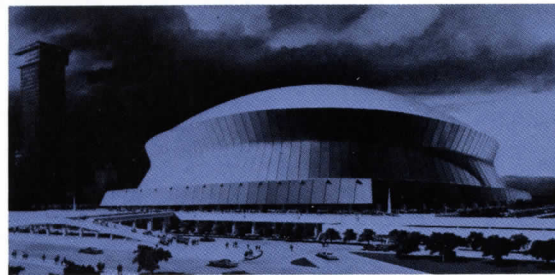

You will find Dillard University located in the geographic center of New Orleans. It exercises a constructive influence upon the total community, while receiving the best benefits of its central location. The advantage of living and learning in a central, yet peaceful atmosphere within a proud and hospitable urban community is immeasurable.

New Orleans has a reputation that is world-wide. The name itself connotes excitement, a blending of cultures and historical uniqueness. The past can easily be relived by strolling through the French Quarter, where hundreds of 18th and 19th Century buildings, narrow streets and rainbows of flowers blend beautifully with 20th Century structures. French, Spanish, African, and Caribbean influences are apparent in the social customs, the architecture and in the people and languages of New Orleans. Dillard University is influenced by and reflects all of these influences.

Music is heard everywhere—a tribute to New Orleans, the "Jazz Mecca of the World." Its influence is found in the rhythmic dialects of her citizens and in the tempo of their daily lives. It is a city charged with energy, yet there is still the deliberate pace reminiscent of the past.

A center of trade and commerce, New Orleans is, in fact, the second largest seaport in the United States. This distinction makes the city not only commercially healthy, providing employment opportunities for students and graduates in countless fields, but it gives her also a distinctly international flavor. She is a center of travel and a favorite city of national and foreign visitors. You will find few dull moments in New Orleans where intellectual, social and cultural facilities abound. The city boasts theatres, art galleries, parks, museums and a nationally known symphony orchestra, opera company and repertory theater.

Most of all, New Orleans is a progressive city where people from all backgrounds live in harmony and people of all cultures are welcome.

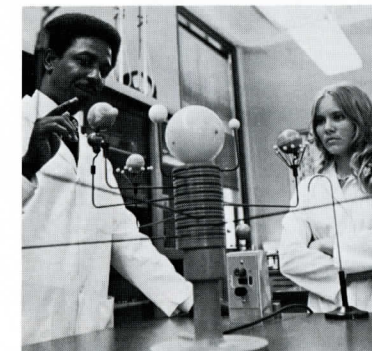

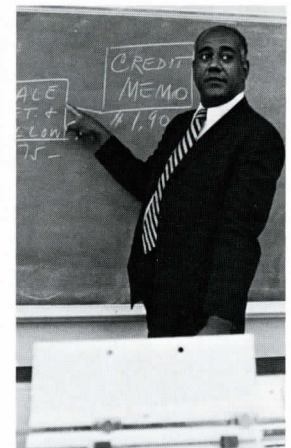

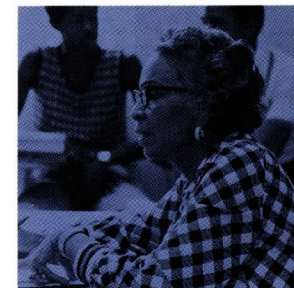

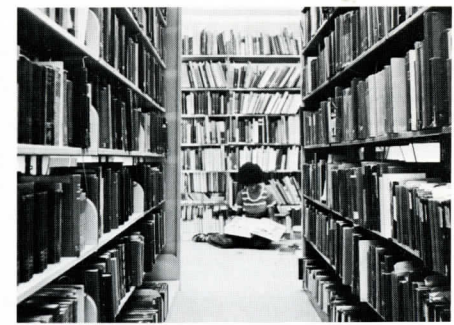

The faculty and academic program

A university is as good as its faculty, and the Dillard University faculty is excellent. The faculty is international in background and training. Its members include scholars from such countries and continents as Africa, Cuba, France, Germany, India and Portugal. All are highly trained and professionally competent in their fields, and they are more interested in the welfare of their students and in education than in their personal goals. No matter how prominent, none is remote to the student.

You will be considered as a person by your professors. There is a ratio of approximately ten students to each faculty member, which means you will receive individual attention in class and personal counseling when needed.

The academic program at Dillard University is offered under five divisions of study: education, humanities, natural sciences, nursing and social sciences. Major concentration in academic divisions begins in the sophomore year after completion of a broader and more generalized freshman year.

The Bachelor of Arts degree is awarded in four Divisions of study. In the Division of Nursing, the Bachelor of Science degree is granted.

The Division of Education

Majors offered in:

elementary, special & early childhood education
physical education, health and recreation

Education

With a degree and a major area of study in the Division of Education you will be prepared to teach at the elementary or secondary levels, gain competency in a second teaching field, or continue study in graduate school. You will receive a thorough liberal arts education with specialization in a particular area of interest. All programs of teacher education satisfy the requirements for a teacher's certificate designated by the Louisiana State Department of Education. The Division of Education administers all curricula, with the exception of music, designed for teacher preparation. A student who plans to teach in the elementary school or in the area of health, physical education and recreation is considered a major in the Division of Education. A student planning to teach in secondary schools is classified as a major in the Division which offers his subject of specialization. Students interested in the area of Special Education or Early Childhood Education should consult the Chairman of the Division of Education at registration. Courses in the Psychology of the Mentally Retarded and Exceptional Child are included in this program.

The Division of Education also offers a major in Psychology and provides appropriate electives for students in other Divisions who wish or need to broaden their understanding of human behavior. The program is geared to the preparation of students who wish to continue the study of Psychology beyond the bachelor's degree.

Humanities

A student in the Division of Humanities will study man's cultural life as expressed in philosophy, religion, language, art, music, customs and literature. He will develop his creative abilities as well as his sense of self-worth. With a degree in areas of the Humanities, a graduate may proceed to graduate or professional schools in the respective fields or he may become an accomplished writer, lecturer, actor, musician, or acquire personal satisfaction and insight through the further study of religion and philosophy. All courses in the Humanities are revised and kept up-to-date in order to meet the needs of present and future students.

Natural Sciences

With a major in one of the Natural Sciences, a graduate may qualify to enter employment in science fields in industry and government, to work in industrial research or perhaps in one of the government science agencies. He also may teach on the secondary level or continue his study in graduate school.

The Pre-Medicine and Pre-Dentistry programs provide excellent preparation for acceptance and continued study in professional schools of medicine, dentistry, and biomedical sciences.

Our recently added Bio-Medical program is designed to prepare students for advancement to the health and health research professions. The University occasionally uses the lecture services and consultations of practicing medical professionals who provide students with first-hand knowledge and experiences to reinforce and to complement textbook theory. Valuable field experience is gained through student study at Flint-Goodridge Hospital of Dillard University, Meharry Medical College, Tulane Medical School and other medical schools across the country.

Nursing

Dillard University has the first nationally accredited collegiate program of nursing in the State of Louisiana. The University's excellent reputation in the nursing profession has enabled its graduates to find employment in every area of the nation and in foreign countries. Graduates hold high nursing service, teaching and administrative positions in hospitals, health agencies and professional schools.

The Flint-Goodridge Hospital of Dillard University serves as a center where classroom knowledge is reinforced by clinical experiences. This hospital and other area hospitals and agencies provide nursing experiences in the areas of surgical, medical, diet therapy, emergency, obstetric, pediatric, psychiatric, nursery school, and community and maternal-child nursing.

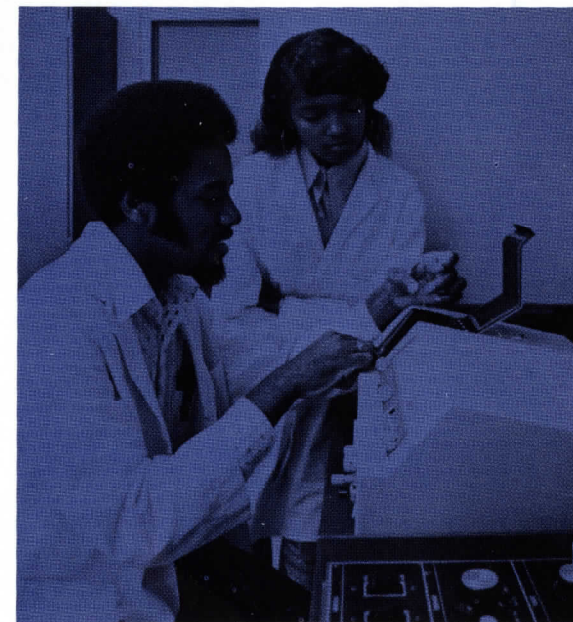

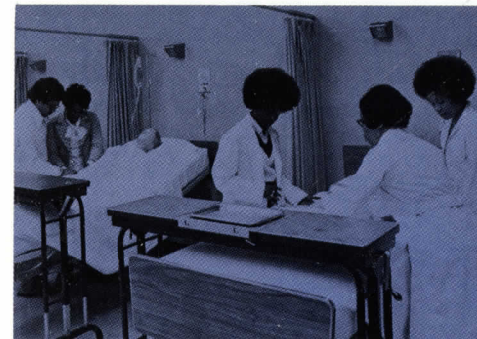

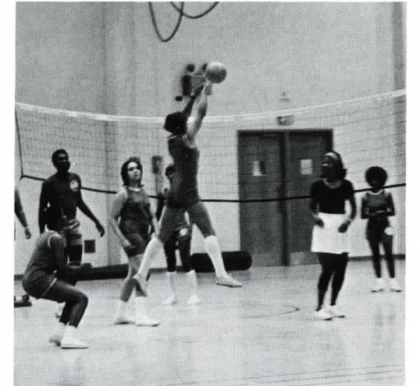

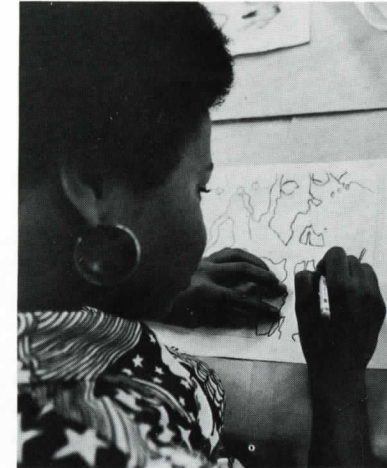

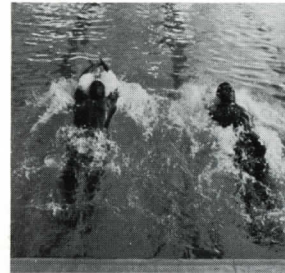

The Division of Nursing offers a four-year curriculum leading to the Bachelor of Science degree. It includes study of the biological and physical sciences, social sciences, humanities, medical sciences, and other general education courses in addition to the required professional courses.

Social Sciences

Basic pre-professional training for students interested in the fields of sociology, anthropology, business administration and economics, law and international relations and social work, or in secondary and collegiate teaching is provided in the Division of Social Sciences. The Social Sciences Research Seminar, in which students and faculty work together conducting research on various problems, gives students an opportunity to explore questions while learning research techniques which may be used later in graduate studies or in employment.

Dillard's pre-social work program is designed to give graduates enough academic and practical experiences to qualify them for lower level social work positions immediately upon graduation from Dillard, or to make them highly qualified to compete for valuable scholarships and fellowships to a wide variety of schools of social work throughout the nation.

The department of Business Administration in the Division of Social Sciences is one of the fastest growing areas of concentration. A rapidly expanding job market, the demand for qualified graduates in the business fields and the heavy concentration of trade and commerce in New Orleans have influenced the increase of students in this concentration.

The Freshman Year

All phases of the Dillard University Freshman curriculum seek to encourage the student to become responsible in his own development and to make mature judgments. Every effort is made to aid the student in the improvement of his writing, speaking and reading skills and in his capability for interpretation and logical thinking. The Core Curriculum places emphasis upon development of a dynamic interaction between student and teacher through the use of small classes, a close working relationship and a flexible schedule.

An interdisciplinary core of courses entitled "Man in Perspective" is the center of the freshman year of study, and it occupies the major portion of his time. The core courses include studies in the social sciences, the biological sciences and the humanities. In addition, the Core Program offers skills courses and laboratories in mathematics, writing and reading.

Special Programs and Facilities

Honors Program

Superior students are able to study in areas of concentration in greater depth and to take part in interdisciplinary studies through the University Honors Program.

This program emphasizes the exercise of initiative, inquiry and individual responsibility through independent study. Honor students work under the supervision of faculty members, and study schedules are designed to meet the indivudal needs and interest of the students.

There are chapters of six national honor societies on the Dillard University campus, including Alpha Chi, Alpha Kappa Mu, Beta Kappa Chi, Beta Beta Beta, Lambda Iota Tau, and Psi Chi Honor Societies.

The International Center

Increased awareness of the necessity to appreciate and to understand foreign cultures brought about the creation of Dillard's International Center. The Center sponsors academically oriented programs to prepare students for roles in international life. The center also provides hospitality to international visitors and provides interested students an opportunity to come in contact with students and visitors from other nations through regular participation in International Center activities.

Through University sponsored programs, Dillard students and faculty travel and study in such countries as Mexico, India, France, Austria, England, Russia, Poland and in African countries. Dillard University is a member of the Association of Colleges and Universities for International-Intercultural Studies, Inc. (ACUIIS), an organization of small, private colleges in the United States interested in promoting student international and intercultural learning experiences. Dillard University is also a member of International House of New Orleans.

Cooperative Relationship with Tulane University

Dillard University has engaged in a mutually beneficial and formal cooperative relationship with Tulane University since 1965, involving exchanges of students, faculties and program resources. Through the cooperating relationship, students of either institution may attend classes and lectures and use the facilities of the other university. The student may not only expand his reference and study sources, but also increase his exposure to different teaching methods, widen his circle of friends and experience college life on a campus other than his own. In addition to free use of academic facilities, he is able to participate in Tulane's ROTC program.

Prefreshman Program

Since 1959, Dillard University has conducted a Prefreshman Program for eight weeks in the summer for students who have been admitted to the fall class. Students participate on a voluntary basis at no cost to them. The program emphasizes communication skills, mathematics, music, health, physical education and cultural experiences. Research studies, made since its inception, show that Pre-freshman students who enter Dillard do so with a clear advantage and usually make better grades during their college career than those who do not participate.

Concurrent Enrollment

Dillard University offers opportunity in its summer program, as well as during the regular term, for students of exceptional ability to earn college credits while still in high school.

Eligibility for this program is based on the following criteria:

1. High academic achievement during at least four semesters of high school work.
2. High scores of standardized achievement test—PSAT, SAT or ACT.
3. Recommendation of high school counselor or principal.

Students who enroll under this plan may earn a maximum of six semester hours during the summer term, and may be eligible to continue their enrollment during the following school year. A total of 12 semester hours may be earned under this plan at no cost to students who qualify.

High School Workshop

Talented Louisiana high school juniors and seniors are eligible to participate in the High School Workshop on Careers in Education, which is designed to involve them in critical and creative exploration regarding particular careers in the field of education.

A series of seminars and cultural activities constitute the program of the workshop. Subject matter seminars include Elementary or Secondary Education, Special Education, Bi-Linqual Education, Educational Television, Instructional Media, Guidance and Counseling, and Vocational Education. Each student is expected to participate in a career practicum which offers opportunity to serve as a teacher aide in a local school, where he tutors in reading and mathematics, works with exceptional children, gains in-depth experience as a media specialist, or in television production.

There is no cost for chosen participants or their schools.

Upward Bound

The National Upward Bound Program had its beginning on the Dillard University campus. Dillard's present program involves high school juniors and seniors in an intensive series of experiences designed to enhance their desire to continue formal training after high school, upgrade their basic skills in the areas of English, mathematics, sciences, and reading, and to expand their cultural horizons. A bridge phase of the program provides opportunity for participants who have graduated to earn six semester hours college credit during the summer following their graduation from high school.

The Dillard Campus

The Dillard campus has been described as one of the most beautiful in the nation. There are 19 buildings on a 62 acre tract of land in residential New Orleans. It is characterized by shady walkways and impressive white buildings accented by majestic oaks and landscaped lawns. An atmosphere of peaceful learning is ever present, yet there is a dynamic sense of energy.

The buildings reflect this feeling. Their stately white columns represent strength and solidarity in an atmosphere of serious pursuit of learning and character development.

Unique in its architecture and design, the Lawless Memorial Chapel serves as the center of student religious life. Worship services, recitals, concerts and lectures are planned by the Religious Life Committee and student attendance is requested. The Chapel is non-denominational and open to all who seek its services.

The Will Alexander Library contains over 100,000 volumes. The Library receives over 5,000 periodicals regularly and is growing at a rate of 6,000 volumes a year.

Library facilities include seminar and conference rooms, music listening rooms, exhibition areas, carrels, a casual reading room and audio-visual facilities. Students may take advantage of the Inter-Library Loan system between Dillard and other college and university libraries in the New Orleans area. Through this system, additional reading and research materials are made available to students. Dillard students are free to use the facilities of member school libraries.

Kearny Hall serves as the Student Union Building and is the center for student activities. Between and after classes, students enjoy the facilities of the lounge, the recreation rooms and the snack bar. Kearny Hall also houses the office of the Dean of Students, the Student Union Association, the newspaper and yearbook offices, dining rooms, ping pong and billiard rooms and the campus bookstore.

Albert W. Dent Hall, the recently completed health and physical education building, houses an olympic-size swimming pool, a regulation basketball court and gymnasium, the International Center, classrooms, bowling lanes, a physio-therapy room, a dance studio, a psychology laboratory, and the offices of the Division of Education. The air-conditioned building also has three practice basketball courts and volleyball and tennis courts.

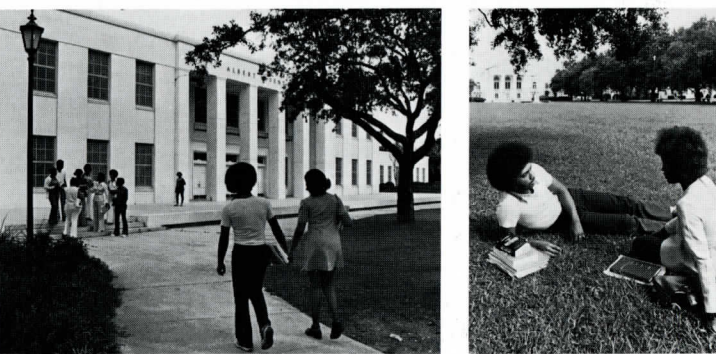

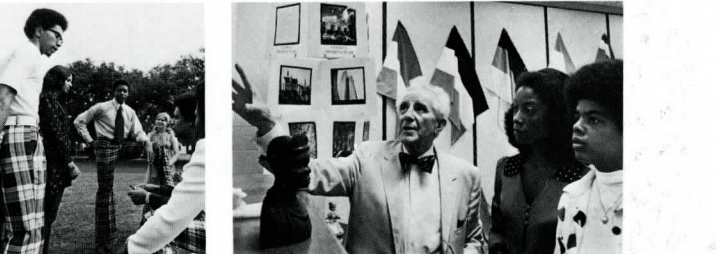

Four dormitories provide living accommodations for five hundred resident students. Meals are planned under the supervision of trained personnel and are served in the dining hall.

Academic and study laboratories provide opportunity for students to enhance their textbook knowlege. Among them are a psychology laboratory, an electronic laboratory to augment the teaching of English, speech and foreign languages. There are several science laboratories, one of which is equipped for research through electrophoresis and infrared techniques. Nursing, business administration and independent study laboratories are also available.

The Amistad Research Center is one of the world's outstanding collections of original manuscripts on the history and development of the civil rights concept in the United States. It is part of the Dillard University campus. Over six million manuscripts, letters and other items are included in the Center's archives which are open to researchers, undergraduate and graduate students.

The Frederick D. Hall Music Collection is another distinguished archival collection. This collection of music and musical items contains works of Negro arrangers and composers. It contains tapes, recordings and original musical scores.

Students activities and campus life

Students at Dillard have numerous options as to leisure activities. The University campus, the City of New Orleans, and the surrounding colleges and universities offer a variety of campus and off-campus entertainment outlets.

On campus, a student may participate in co-curricular activities ranging from academic clubs to sorority and fraternity activities to organizing special services clubs to membership in Religious Life organizations. A student may be an active member in a number of special interest groups including the Foreign Language Club, International Club, Pre-Med Club, Baptist Student Union, Catholic Campus Ministry, Methodist Student Movement, Psychology Club, Busecon Business Club, Modern Dance Club and Santa Philomena Nurses Club. He may attend lectures and concerts sponsored by the Lyceum Committee. Dillard students and faculty are active in community theater work in several city theater companies. Dillard Lecture Series bring outstanding intellectuals from all professional areas to the campus.

There are eight social fraternities and sororities, eleven academic clubs, six national honorary societies and two service fraternities at Dillard. A student may exercise his capabilities for leadership through membership in the Student Union (the student governing body), University standing committees and special committees.

Students with creative abilities in writing or photography may find available positions on the staffs of the student newspaper, Le Courtboullion, or the University yearbook, LeDiable Bleu.

The University competes in intercollegiate basketball, track, swimming, tennis and golf. All students are invited to engage in intramural football, basketball, swimming and other sports.

How much does it cost?

Tuition and fees
$1300 per year

Room and board
$850

Students living in one of the new air conditioned dormitories are charged an additional $75.

Admission to Dillard University

Because we are a private university, our admission policy is selective, based upon academic merit and good personal character. Students are expected to show promise of both high academic performance and good personal character. Students are admitted on examination of high school records, results of the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) or the American College Test (ACT), and recommendations of high school principals and counselors. Students whose high school records are marginal will find difficulty entering into or pursuing the academic program of Dillard University.

Application procedures

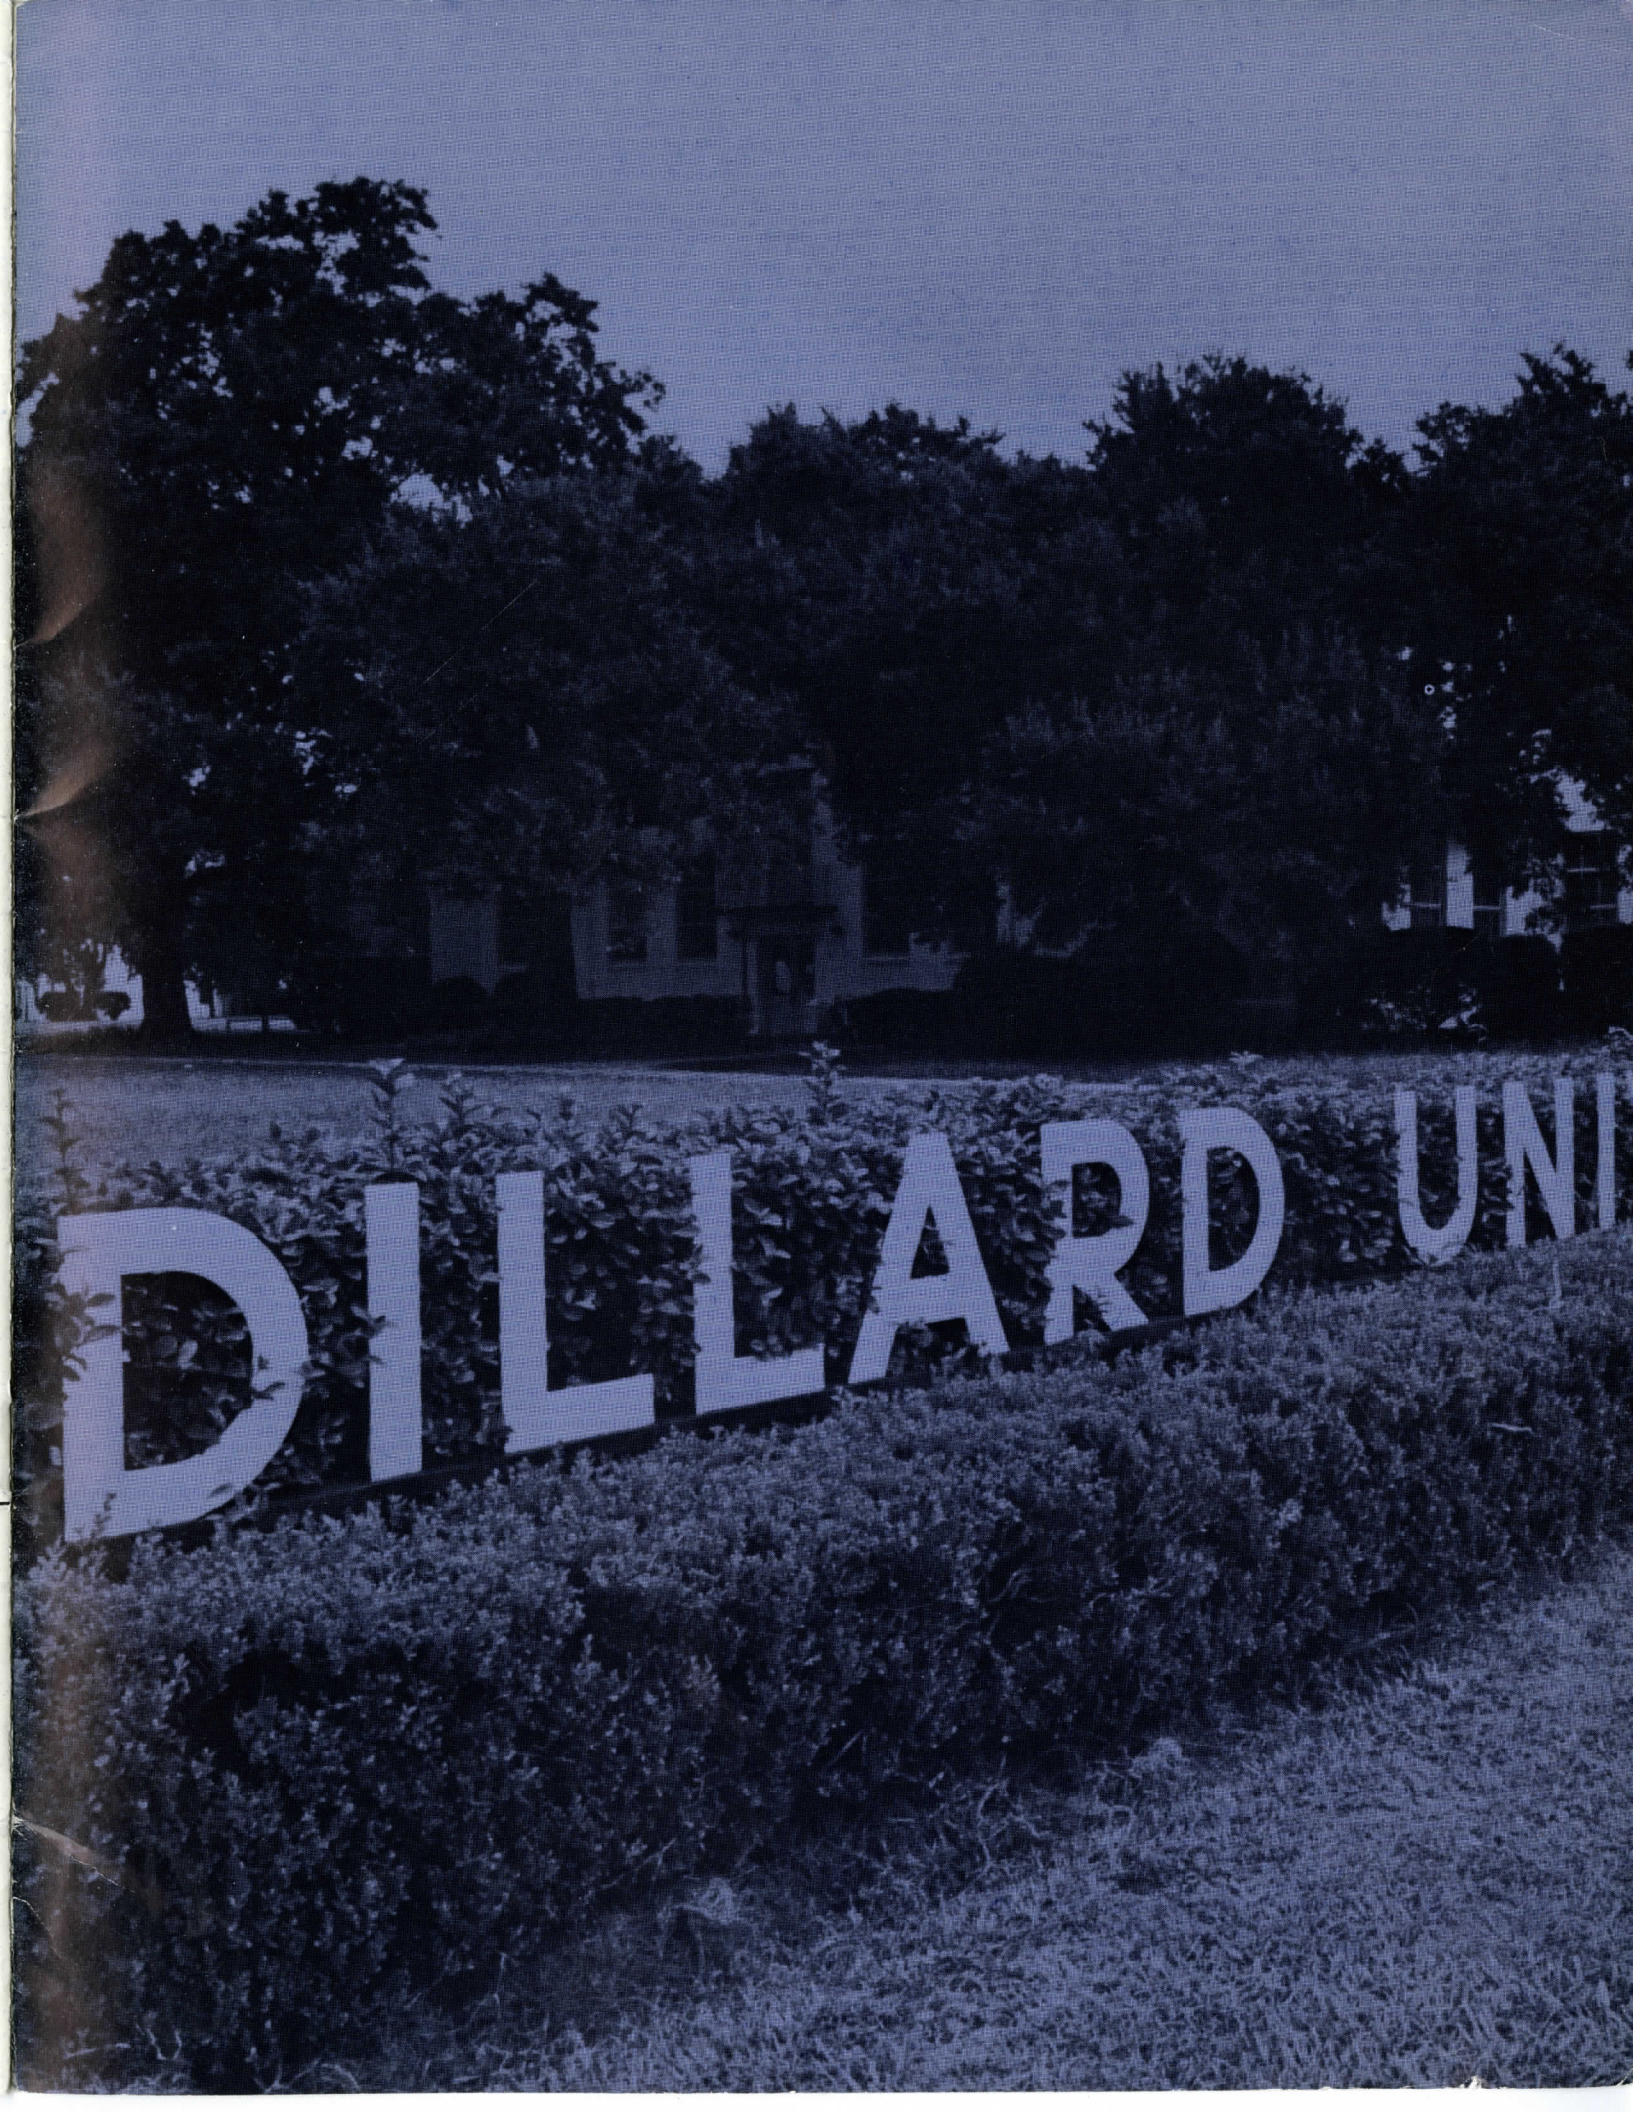

1. Return the completed application to the Admissions Office as soon as possible, along with a $5.00 application fee.
2. Take the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) or the American College Test (ACT) and have the results sent to the Admissions Office.
3. Have a copy of your high school transcript sent directly from your high school to the Dillard University Admissions Office.
4. Have two recommendations of high school principal, counselor and/or teachers sent to Admissions Office.
5. Have medical and dental forms completed and returned to the University Health Service.

Can you accept the challenge Dillard University offers?

If you can, you may become a part of Dillard—a University that is seriously dedicated to the education of today's youth. We believe that Dillard's dedication to truth today will ultimately benefit life tomorrow. Come visit our campus and New Orleans. The visit may help you to determine that entering Dillard University will be the best step toward your future.
